B. W. STARBIRD,
Managing Editor GAZETTE.

The Chicago Tribune is raising a fund to erect a monument to the memory of the persons who were killed in the Haymarket riots. The monument ought not to be in Chicago. Every one admires the way in which the judiciary and law officers of Chicago and the state of Illinois have carried out and vindicated the law. To honor the memory of those who died in defence of the law would be a fit complement to the bravery of November 11th.

An exciting school election took place in St Louis last Tuesday. The issue was whether the foreign languages should be taught in the primary schools. By an overwhelming vote St Louis decided that foreign languages should not be taught in the primary schools. Undoubtedly, this is the right course to pursue if we wish the foreign element in this country to become Americans. For the state to educate foreigners in their native language is practically to end in keeping them foreigners. It is expensive enough to make these foreigners Americans and we ought not to pay out money to keep them foreigners.

Max O'Rell, who for some time was the London correspondent of the GAZETTE is quite successful in his lecture tour in this country. A New York critic says this of him:

Max O'Rell has "caught on." He is really very droll. At the close of his lecture the other night he said: "Gentlemen and ladies you must have inherited some of it the sang froid of your Saxonic ancestors. You have heard me mercilessly murder your beautiful language for two hours and a half with impunity. In his efforts not to swallow any of the language as is the misfortune of his countrymen who murder it he rests more than sufficiently vigorously on the consonants, with the above result." The audience fairly screamed with delight.

There will be almost as great a change in the organization of the new house of representatives as there is when the majority changes from republican to democratic. One hundred and thirty members of the last house will not appear in the new. In this one hundred and thirty are the chairmen of some of the most important committees like W. R. Morrison of the committee of ways and means, John Randolph Tucker of the judiciary, James F. Miller of banking and currency, John H. Reagan of commerce, Wilkie of rivers and harbors, Bragg of military affairs, Voth of public land, Wellborn of Indian affairs and several other chairmen. Unless some of the new members of the house show a good deal of ability, the democrats will be very weak on the floor of the next congress. The ablest debater on the democratic side, Mr. Carlisle, will be in the chair. Randolph Tucker was regarded as the ablest legal authority, General Bragg as the most dangerous debater and Reagan of Texas as one of the ablest managers on the floor. The democratic side was weak in the last session. It will need a more able body to hold its own this session.

The London newspapers publish an article headed "Some effects of Jay Gould's visit to England." The article was marked with blue pencil and circulated in the New York stock exchange a few days ago. Among some of the effects of Mr. Gould's visit, the following:

The city police is being augmented.
Chubb's patent locks are in extensive demand.
The water companies have advanced their rates.
A prominent safe maker advertises "Gould proof safes."
The guard at the Bank of England has been doubled.
Mme. Tussaud is making an addition to the Chamber of Horrors.
The queen's jubilee presents will be sent with letters of congratulation.
Guards are being set locked over the tenders of railroad trains in England.
The brokers and bookkeepers of the London banks are being armed with revolvers.
The safe Deposit Company's vaults are all full and are working day and night to receive new ones.
The despatch of private messages for delivery and to forward the telegraph wires and the telegraph boys have been charged accordingly.

Princess Beatrice is one of the most expert and fearless skaters on the Dutch ponds, but her mother, the queen, has forbidden her to skate on the Serpentine. Under the Empress Eugenie, the Princess Beatrice was a favorite skating companion of the late Prince Imperial, and it was on the Serpentine that the Prince Imperial received the first lessons in skating which he afterwards put to such good use in the Zulu war. The Princess Beatrice is a graceful skater, and is very fond of the exercise, but her mother, who is herself a fine skater, has a horror of accidents, and has given strict orders that her daughter is not to skate on the Serpentine, where the ice is always thin and dangerous.

William A. [illegible] of Sparta, Ill., has been appointed by the governor of that state to succeed Gen. Logan in the senate. Mr. [illegible] is a lawyer by profession, and has been a member of the state senate for several years. He is a democrat, and is said to be a man of ability. He will be a candidate before the legislature for the full term.

[illegible] Marie Wainwright

Miss Wainwright's [illegible] has a continual round of triumphs. Supported [illegible] with Susan Booth and other eminent [illegible] she has won fame and everyone acknowledges her to be the most artistic and refined representative on the boards. Her many [illegible] have all been successes. She has the rare faculty of [illegible] graceful figure and "face to face" with the audience as well as the most exclusive beauty of the [illegible] which is the greatest charm of Mrs. Langtry. She understands [illegible] to exactly the art of properly costuming clothes, chain and [illegible] robes, and the waist she has grown so fond wears on Virginia's [illegible] of soft, clinging crepe like material that falls in graceful folds half [illegible] and half disclosing the curves and lines of her figure.

As Gretchen, in Wills's Faust and Margaret, a work of dramatic force as [illegible] Miss Wainwright is an ideal Margaret. True, she discards the [illegible] and frivolous mantles of the average Gretchen, but in their place she shows a [illegible] fair in face and form of [illegible] simplicity and a refinement that [illegible] alone to the part in hand. She gets her [illegible] to the softest and most pathetic pitch, and the heaven's despair [illegible] of the unfortunate girl [illegible] appears in every phase of the [illegible] nation. But Miss Wainwright is great in everything she undertakes. Every role she essays is adorned and [illegible] by her own personality. As Beatrice she is an arch and sprightly and captivating as Ellen Terry, her lady Macbeth is powerfully tragic and womanly withal, her Virginia, sweet, charming and divinely loyable.

Smelting in Colorado

Mining Industry.

The smelting industry in Colorado was never in a more prosperous and healthy condition than at the present time. Nearly all the furnaces in the state are in blast, and the supply of ore is large and regular. It is true that the prices charged the miner for reducing their ores is no longer such as to [illegible] the smelter to make a fortune in a single year, yet they are sufficient to admit of

SHERBURNE G. HOPKINS.

The Man Who Sent a Bogus Bomb to Chief Justice Waite.

It will be remembered that a couple of weeks ago Chief Justice Waite received through the mail shortly before the execution of the Chicago Anarchists a box very mysterious in appearance and having all the appearances of being dangerous. It was sent to Chief Justice Waite upon the supposition that it contained a bomb. The box was taken by the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, who was then in the city, and the correspondent, assisted by Sherburne G. Hopkins, of the Rocky Mountain News, opened the box. It was found to contain a bomb, but it was a bogus one, and was made by Mr. Hopkins. It will be seen, from the following cut, that Mr. Hopkins is a fine looking man, strikingly well developed young man. He is also the Leadville correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, has [illegible] laughing eyes, light curly complexion and [illegible]

S. G. HOPKINS.

lar features. He is something of a dude in his manner, and his action in making this machine should be ascribed rather to thoughtlessness than to any evil intention. He says now that he did not realize the seriousness of his act, and that he never regretted it more than he does now. He thought it would make a sensation in newspaper circles, and would then blow over. He was much surprised to find that the police had taken the matter up, and was disgusted to learn that what he had considered a harmless joke could face to make a case for the court. Mr. Hopkins likes to write sensations, and he says that while he has had a number of newspaper articles such as the remarkable [illegible] which ran through every paper in the country, and even as high as the duke of Argyle and a whole [illegible] of the coast of Maine last summer, all of which proceeds of the Associated Press, he has never written any stories that would injure any one and that he has never written a malicious line in his life. He does not, however, seem to regret the wake he has of the public with so many sons of a crime from [illegible] Boston Massachusetts, and he will freely [illegible] as one of the most [illegible] writers of all kinds in the future.

The Seaside Institute.

Mrs. Frances Folsom Cleveland, wife of the president of the United States, visited Bridgeport, Conn., on the 10th instant, officiated at the opening of the Seaside Institute, and shook hands with over 1,000 working girls, all [illegible] during a [illegible] session. The amusing feature of the occasion was that Mrs. Cleveland came to open the institute and for that only, it appeared strictly to business, [illegible] all other invitations. The result is that many wealthy and fashionable people are somewhat disappointed. Many devices were employed to secure tickets, even the servants girls were appealed to that they might purchase regular tickets, but the workingwomen of the factories considered the presence of needing Mrs. Cleveland above all price and refused to sell.

The Seaside Institute was built at a cost of $100,000 by a Bridgeport firm of manufacturers, who have some 1,300 work in their employ. They did not follow any model—the institute is not like the Familistere of Belgium, or the Social Ilee of Guise, in France. It is a place
